Tantalizing getaways for the New Year

WRITTEN BY CORRY COOK

Escape the winter chill with the one you love by spending Valentine's weekend at CuisinArt Golf Resort & Spa in Anguilla. This legendary resort closed in September 2017 after sustaining significant damage from Hurricane Irma. It is now reopened with fully restored architecture, completely redesigned interiors, and a fresh, modernized look throughout. The redesign also added a 5,000-square-foot event space with Swarovski lighting, a splash pad for kids of all ages, a new spa concept, and revamped menus at its spectacular world-class restaurants. The CuisinArt Golf Club is back to its pre-storm splendor, with special incentivized rates from $1,095 per night including romantic meals, champagne and chocolate-covered strawberries, and a couple's spa treatment.

As soon as the first snowflakes fall, Québec City gets into its winter groove and Quebecers are known for being even more warm and welcoming than usual. Experience one of the most romantic and charming winter wonderlands in North America this February with a stay at Auberge Saint-Antoine in the heart of Quebec City. From late November to late March, the region is one giant playground while Old Québec dazzles with its enchanting blanket of snow. Surrounded by colonial buildings and the St. Lawrence River, Auberge Saint-Antoine guests can explore in style the city's cobblestone streets and colonial architecture by horse-drawn carriage, stop at the Strom Spa for a Nordic spa treatment overlooking the St. Lawrence River, or revel in one of the world's largest winter carnivals, Carnaval, running February 7-16. Winter rates begin at $205 per evening.

With a divine nonstop flight from SFO direct to Lisbon, Portugal, a little slice of European heaven is closer than ever. Madeira Island, nicknamed "The Garden Island of The Atlantic," is known for its fortified wine, botanical gardens, cultural festivals, and perpetual spring climate. The Portuguese outpost is also building a reputation as a new destination for adventure travel with hiking, canyoning, and paragliding in addition to the locale's famous street tobogganing. Designed by Nini Andrade Silva, one of Madeira's most renowned interior designers, the new Savoy Palace's many highlights include a 33,000-square-foot spa featuring 11 treatment rooms, a halo therapy room, sensory showers, Turkish hammam, and beauty bar. The treatment menu includes holistic healing rituals inspired by the Laurissilva Forest, Madeira's UNESCO World Heritage site and the largest surviving laurel forest in the world. Guests in Savoy suites in need of a boost can experience a private Couples Retreat by Sudashi, featuring exfoliation, full-body massage, and facial. Rates begin at $175 per evening and include breakfast. ●
