TORONTO

CANADA'S LARGEST CITY – and the fourth largest in North America – is celebrated for its food scene, the product of its many ethnic neighborhoods. Start your visit by checking into the luxurious Fairmont Royal York, which serves afternoon tea and has a swank indoor pool. For something more edgy, try The Drake Hotel, where rooms are filled with art.

Get out and explore, starting with dim sum and eclectic shopping in Chinatown, at places such as R&D, from MasterChef Canada winner Eric Chong. Other interesting (and tasty) ethnic neighborhoods are Greektown and Little Portugal. Or explore the Distillery District, a collection of boutiques, galleries, restaurants, bakeries and two chocolate makers.

Get a sampling of Ontario's culinary bounty at St. Lawrence Market's many food stalls. Or for something quieter and more romantic, Canoe is one of the city's most romantic restaurants, with a nice skyline view, high in the TD Bank Tower.

Give your palate a break with a stop at Castle Loma, a castle dating back to the early 1900s, in the posh Yorkville neighborhood.

Up for another quick flight? A 90-minute jaunt in the sky from Toronto is Quebec City, a charming town where French is spoken first, English second. A newly revitalized waterfront in Old Quebec is a sweet spot for a stroll. Across the street from it is an intimate luxury hotel called Auberge Saint-Antoine, with a rooftop eatery, Chez Muffy, boasting 700 labels on its wine list, and overlooking the St. Lawrence River. Artifacts and archeological items are on display throughout the hotel. ♦
